

ASAS Science Writing Internship

Description: The American Society of Animal Science is currently accepting applications for its 2017 science communications summer internship program. During the eight-week internship, interns will work with the ASAS Scientific Communications Associate to write press releases, write and edit online content, produce podcasts and create video content for ASAS sites. Interns will also travel, expenses paid, to Baltimore, Md., to report on the ASAS annual meeting, July 8-12, 2017. The internship begins in early June and concludes at the beginning of August.

Requirements: Applicants must be currently enrolled in a university program. Applicants must be willing to provide proof of health insurance. Applicants must have writing experience, and they should be comfortable writing about science for a non-scientific audience. Applicants must be willing to live in Champaign, Illinois during the eight-week internship. Interns will be expected to work 40 hours per week. Interns will be responsible for travel expenses to Champaign and for finding housing in Champaign.

Salary: $1,500 per month for two months.

Applications due: October 15, 2016

Please submit a cover letter, resume with references, and two writing samples. Any questions or application materials should be sent to ASAS Scientific Communications Associate, Ms. Kim Schoonmaker, at kims@asas.org.
